THE CITY OF QUEBEC.

INCIDENTS OF THE SETTLEMENT AND HISTORY OF A FAMOUS PLACE.

[Written for the Whig and Courier after a visit to Quebec in 1877.]

To the people of the United States, Quebec with its history is never failing of interest. It was founded on the 3d of July, 1608, by Capt. Samuel de Champlain with twenty-eight followers, composed of masons, carpenters, traders and others, who were all actively engaged during the remainder of the season preparing a dwelling for man, proof against frost, and a fort against savage treachery.

The little settlement struggled through many difficulties; dissension, and starvation, and frequent efforts were made by the savages to exterminate the colony.

In one short communication the devotion of Champlain to his little settlement cannot be traced; it is well worthy of particular inquiry from the lover of the early history of North America.

His numerous wars with the Indians and his efforts, both with the colony and the King of the French, show a devotion to his followers seldom, if ever, equaled, and stamps him a man of great ability; and his success was doubtless, largely due to the confidence reposed in him by both those under his command and the heads of the government of France.

He died on Christmas day, 1635, of paralysis, aged sixty-eight years. The colony could not well spare him—for twenty-seven years he had labored hard for its welfare giving up the peace of domestic life, fortune, and everything but enthusiasm for the success of the settlement Quebec; this care was upon his mind with his dying breath, and his last words were for his colony and the succor of its suffering families.

The colony passed through many vicissitudes, as great perhaps as were ever experienced by any settlers in America and survive, and one cannot read of this colony's hardships without a comparison with that of the early Puritan settlers.

Early did the Jesuit Fathers begin their noble work of conversion among the savages. How well they did their work and the result of the self sacrificing life they led. I will not here attempt to narrate. History can scarcely point to a parallel.

Though not from want of interest we will pass over the important part this strong-hold played in the many years after its settlement until 1659.

In June 1659, General Wolf of the British Army appeared with a fleet and landed on the Island of Orleans below the city.

On the 31st July he made an attempt upon the city from the left bank of the Montgomery River and an engagement took place upon Beauport Flats. In the battle the British Army under Wolf, was badly worsted by the French under Montcalm, then commanding the garrison of Quebec.

Wolf returned to his camp upon the Island of Orleans greatly chagrined at the check he had just received. He was apprehensive that the defeat would make a very unfavorable impression in Britain of himself, and he imagined that jibes of incompetency would be cast at him from all quarters. His hope of military glory vanished and good fortune in which he trusted so much, seemed to have abandoned him at the very outset of his career as commander-in-chief.

He seemed to lose some of his military perception, for he sent Murray with 1,200 men to open communication with General Amherst at Lake Champlain. In this effort he failed to disturb Montcalm, though his movements were closely watched.

This second disappointment seemed to develop a malady which was present in the bodily frame of Wolf, and brought him almost to death's door. When convalescent he addressed a long letter to Secretary Pitt, recounting the obstacles against which he had to struggle, and expressed the bitterness of failure of all his past efforts.

The spirit of Wolf no less than his bodily powers, sank before a situation which left him "only a choice of difficulties," as he expressed himself. He called his officers together and offered them several plans for attacking Gen. Montcalm, asking them for their opinions as to any chance of success. What passed at that meeting the historian does not inform us, but this we do know, that he prepared boats and rafts behind the Island of Orleans, and on the evening of Sept. 12, 1659, passed with his whole army above the city of Quebec, landed above the fortifications at a place now known as Wolf's Cove, ascended the steep and rough bank of the St. Lawrence, and when morning dawned the whole British Army were in full possession of the "Plains of Abraham."

The scene of this glorious fight is rich in natural beauty, and whoever visits this celebrated battle-ground will admit that no site could be found better adapted for the display of military skill and evolutions, or the exertion of physical force and valor. The battle-ground is almost an unbroken surface. The plains were then free from inclosures, though in some places bushes were growing.

About day-break the Governor of the town informed Montcalm that Wolf had appeared on the "Plains of Abraham." Nothing could exceed his astonishment; he refused to believe it at first, observing: "It is only Mr. Wolf with a small party, come to burn a few houses about him and retreat." On being informed, however, that Wolf with the whole army was at the "Plains of Abraham," "Then," said he, "they have at last got on the right side of the mountain, and must be dislodged." Therefore we must endeavor to crush them by our numbers and scalp them all before twelve o'clock."

Each prepared for battle. About eight o'clock some sailors succeeded in dragging a light six-pounder up the steep bank, and this was the only gun used by the English in the action. The French marched out to meet them.

The two generals met each other at the head of their respective troops when the fighting was most severe. Montcalm was on the left of the French,—Wolf on the right of the English, so each must have seen the other as they met. Under the eyes of their respective leaders the greatest exertions were made by the troops of both sides. Wolf was struck by some Canadian marksmen in the wrist while exposing himself at the head of a battalion; he folded a handkerchief about the wound, and headed a charge of the grenadiers which was completely successful. "He was struck with a second ball in the groin, but still pressed on, and just as the enemy were about to give away, he received a third ball in the breast and felt mortally wounded." It was victory indeed but purchased by the death of Wolf—a hero of uncommon merit, though scarcely known sufficiently to be appreciated by his country. He met a glorious death in the moment of victory—a victory which has forever placed Wolf in history among the most celebrated generals of the world. He survived the wounds long enough to learn that his plan had been successful.

"Support me," he said, to the officer near him, "do not let my brave soldiers see me fall." The day is ours; keep it."

Water was brought to quench his thirst from a well. The charge was continued when the officer upon whose shoulder the dying hero had leaned, exclaimed, "They run!" "Who runs?" asked the gallant Wolf with some emotion. The officer replied, "The enemy, sir! they give way in every quarter!" "What!" said he, "do they run already? Send word to Col. Burton and tell him to march Webb's regiment down to St. Charles River, to cut off the retreat of Montcalm from the bridge. Now God be praised—I die happy."

Such was the death of Wolf upon the Plains of Abraham. He was only thirty-two years of age and it has been observed that a death more glorious with circumstances more picturesque and interesting is no where to be found in the annals of history." It has been stated by a writer that Wolf had recently received a copy of Thomas Gray's "Elegy written in a country church yard," and recited it in the boat in undertone, to the officer of his staff, as he passed up the river during the night before the battle. How strangely must have sounded to his ears his own voice repeating the line,

"The paths of glory lead but to the grave,"

It is not improbable that this did occur as the poem was published with others some little time prior to the date of this battle.

The spot consecrated by the fall of General Wolf is in the charge made by the grenadiers is always one visited by the stranger with deep interest and emotion.

The place is marked with a monument upon which are the words—HERE DIED WOLF VICTORIOUS.

The death of Marquis de Montcalm, who commanded the French was no less glorious. He was several years older than Wolf and had given proof of zeal, prudence and great valor. With his own hand he wrested a color from the hand of an English officer at the capture of Oswego.

He had foiled Wolf himself at Montmorenci, and when he met the English on the Plains of Abraham, he was in all respects an antagonist worthy of the British General. How the proud spirit of the Frenchman burned when he learned that he was out-generaled and that General Wolf was on the weak side of the garrison.

Montcalm was first wounded by a musket shot, while fighting at the head of the left, and afterwards by a discharge from the only gun in the possession of the English as we have before observed. He was then on horseback, directing the retreat, nor did he dismount until he had taken every measure for the safety of the remainder of his army.

When within the walls of the city and his wounds were dressed, he requested the surgeon to declare at once whether they were mortal. When told they were, he said, "I am glad of it. How long shall I survive?" The surgeon replied, "ten or twelve hours,—perhaps less." "So much the better" he replied, "I shall not live to see the surrender of Quebec." He then turned over the command of the city to the next in command and made ready to meet death.

He passed the night with his own confessor in religious duties. Before he died he paid a magnanimous compliment to the victorious army.

"Since it was my misfortune to be discomforted and mortally wounded, it is a great consolation to me to be vanquished by so brave and generous an enemy. If I could survive this, gladly would I engage to test three times the number of such forces as I commanded this morning, with a third of British troops." His troops were compared largely of militia badly armed and would not stand fire, much less the bayonet.

His last act was writing a letter recommending the French to the generosity of the victors. "He died at five o'clock on the morning of Sept. 14th, and was buried in an excavation made by the bursting of a shell within the precincts of the Ursuline Convent,—a fit place for the remains of a man who died fighting for the honor, and defence of his county." The capitulation took place on the 18th Sept. 1759. The British flag now waved from the lofty cape Diamond where for more than one hundred and fifty years the white banner of France had held sway, save for a short period, (1620-32.)

The French under De Levis marched upon the city of Quebec, and the British under Gen. Murray went out upon the St. Foys road to meet them. Here on the 28th April, 1760, was fought the Battle of St. Foys. The English were badly beaten and driven into the town. Had the French been less fatigued and assailed the city without allowing the enemy time to reembark, it would probably have fallen again into the hands of the French. The confusion of the British was such that they neglected to remove from their posts; even the city gates stood open for some time.

The English finally came to their senses and returned to their works, and De Levis began a regular siege. On the 15th May a fine squadron from Halifax, and he hurried away leaving his whole train, camp tools, etc., behind him. Here ended the French attempt to take Quebec, and France was stripped of all her North American colonies with the exception of St. Pierre de Miquelon. A beautiful monument has been erected on the St. Foye road in commemoration of the battle fought there April 28, 1760. In my next letter I will say something of the only walled city in America, and the expedition against it under Generals Richard, Montgomery and Benedict Arnold.

STATE NEWS.

Androscoggin.

It is stated that Colonel T. W. Higginson is to give an address at Bates College commencement.

Mr. G. W. Nichols, of Durham, has a pullet less that six months old, that laid last week an egg 6¼ by 7¼ inches in girth.

It is understood that Samuel Littlefield, of Lewiston, indicted for manslaughter, has retained Messrs. Hutchinson & Savage as his counsel.

Mrs. A. F. Sanborn, of Lewiston, has a high-backed chair over a century old. It is yet strong and sturdy, and promises to enter upon a third century with a good degree of vitality.

Wool is very low now, and woolen goods of Lewiston manufacture are sold at very low prices. The demand for woolen goods is said by Lewiston manufacturers to be better than it was last year.

At the Supreme Court in Auburn, Saturday, Judge Walton charged the jury in Parker vs. Clark, the first thing in the morning. The jury brought in a verdict of $1500 for the plaintiff.

The Lewiston Journal says: Six years ago two brothers bought a fine farm in Greene for $6000—bought it without money, with promises to pay. But they had capital in energy and muscle, and they set to work. In five years they paid for the farm and now have a good stock. They began without a dollar in the world, and while Solon Chase and his followers sat in the corner grocery, whittling and grumbling at the times, such men as these two brothers have been winning prosperity by deserving it. There is more good, downright political economy in these two brothers than greenbackism ever dreamed of.

The Lewiston Journal says: Sixty Frenchmen have left Lewiston the past week, for Manitoba, Canada, where they intend to take up farms. Many of them had been at work in mills and many had been out of regular employment. Most of them were young men, but two or three had families which will follow them as soon as they are settled. This is a good movement.

The Lewiston Journal says: The case of the Livermore Falls girl whose misfortunes we recently related, has been exciting much interest in that village. Her betrayer was recently brought before a trial justice at Livermore Falls to answer to a civil process brought against him by the young woman. The young man was able to raise just $400, which amount the girl refused to accept in settlement of the matter. While negotiations were pending the young man left town and has not been seen since. The girl and her friends demanded that he should take the only honorable course, that of marrying her, which he refused to do. It is said that another girl in Livermore Falls is the victim of the same libertine.

The barn of James Towle, in West Leeds, was burned recently. One cow was also burned.

Tom Sullivan, of Portland, is in trouble again. When he appeared in court last Tuesday, for stealing a tub of butter, he was defended by J. D. Fessenden, Esq., and it seems that during some previous consultations, Tom had hit upon a device to make his counsel pay his own fees. His plan was simple. It was to take law books out of Mr. Fessenden's office, and sell them for junk. He carried off about a bushel of books, and sold them for two cents a pound. The junk-dealer notified the police, and so the volumes were restored to the owner. Tom was sent up for sixty days on the butter case, and there are fourteen other larcenies and burglaries for which he has to answer.

The Advertiser says: There were very few vessels of any kind out from Portland, Friday, as the storm had been threatening so long that the fishermen had taken warning. Such as were out had an unpleasant experience in getting in. With the return of fair weather, the fishing business will revive again, for as one old fisherman said, "It seems hard to be kept in port, when you want to be outside making money to pay your winter's bills."

The Portland Machine Works have just completed the first steel boiler ever built in the State. It is for a Bath steamer, which was sent there to receive it Monday. The weight of the boiler is twenty-eight tons. The same company have a contract to build another boiler of about fifteen tons weight, for a propeller boat.

Several new cottages will be built this spring on Pott's Point, Harpswell, and there is talk of another large hotel being erected by Boston parties.

Friday, Mr. J. M. Sawyer, a stable keeper in Portland, sold a pair of hand-some matched horses to Prof. Stephen J. Young of Brunswick.

Mr. Kendall's grocery store at Brunswick was entered last night and some cigars and other articles taken.

The Augusta Journal says: James M. Savage, the Belgrade wife killer, has been removed from the county jail, in Augusta, to the State Prison in Thomaston. He has already been incarcerated seventeen months since the dreadful deed was committed, and has an additional sentence to serve of five years in the State Prison. Should he live until the expiration of that sentence, he will be a man past seventy, and perhaps cured of the fearful appetite for rum which has proved his ruin.

The Portland Argus says: The cow of Mr. Singleton of Warren, gave birth to a calf the 14th inst., which is one of the greatest curiosities ever seen in that vicinity. It has a head which is very large, just like that of a human being and covered with soft hair. It has ears the same as those of man, in the same place, and eyes, nose and mouth to correspond. Its body is 20 inches long just like that of a calf. The cow and this curious looking animal both died, and the latter has been sent to Mr. Walter Gurney, of Rockville, to be stuffed. Upon examination it had no appearance of any brain, but in every other way the head and features were similar to those of a human being. It is now being tanned, and after this process is completed will be stuffed and placed on exhibition.

A Rockland correspondent of the Argus writes: The glorious tidings have been received in this city that the crew of Schooner Mansfield were taken off of that vessel at sea by some unknown steamer, and are now in Boston. Capt. Wm. Osborn is one of our best citizens, and it was feared he had gone to the bottom with all on board, but good was the news which we were at this place, it would probably have fallen again into the hands of the French. SO SORRY

Our gifted contemporary indorses a donkey letter from "Templeton" to the Hartford Courant, in which he ascribes all the political trouble to the naughty Mr Blaine, who "infuriated the gentle Confederates by objecting to forcing amnesty and honors upon Jeff Davis." Our distinguished contemporary says that is splendid talk and so much nicer than the "mad outcry of Chandler or the ravings of the illiterate Logan." We are so glad to know what our able contemporary dislikes. The "mad outcry of Chandler" was the brief speech in which he protested against eulogies of Jeff Davis in the United States Senate graphically sketched the deliberate treason of that chief of rebels, and declared that every loyal man, woman and child in the country looked upon him as a double-dyed traitor. On amiable contemporary does not approve of such uncomplimentary reference to the President of the late Confederacy, and pronounces it a "mad outcry." Well, we have no doubt that sturdy Zach Chandler did feel his wrath rising when he heard pardoned rebels eulogize as the arch traitor in the U. S. Senate Chamber, and the enthusiastic reception of that "mad outcry" by the loyal people of the country indicated that the North is about ready to "get mad" too—Then our learned contemporary was pained again by the "ravings of the illiterate Logan" as he styles the speech of the Senator from Illinois. Well, we are sorry to have our esteemed contemporary annoyed by the illiterate Logan. If Logan orth Chow as much as our gifted contemporary we might justify his speaking in the Senate, but what does Logan know about maintaining the honor and welfare of the country? In 1863 while our contemporary was bending his intellect to the solution of great governmental problems, Logan was simply a private soldier in the U. S. Army in the Mexican war until promoted to be Quartermaster of his regiment. In 1849 Logan was a County Clerk in Illinois, in 1852 then a member of the Bar, he was elected to the Illinois Legislature, in 1858 he was elected Representative in Congress, in 1860 he was re elected, and then "the illiterate Logan" resigned his seat in Congress to go to the battle in 1861. The record of his advancement from Colonel to Major General is as conspicuous in the history of the War for the Union, and at its close his name stood high among the chiefs of the loyal army. After the war he was elected to the 40th and 41st Congresses and in 1871 was chosen Senator of the United States from Illinois serving until 1877. In 1875 he was reelected to the United States Senate, and has been so unfortunate as to offend our eminent contemporary by his first speech.

Our grieved contemporary is quite sure that the lamented Lincoln would not approve the conduct of Chandler and Logan. Indeed we infer that in the conference that were held between President Lincoln and our sagacious contemporary in those trying years from 1860 to 1865, he must have imparted to our contemporary a great deal of confidential information. Pity that your contemporary says, "Could the lamented Lincoln rise from his grave to-day and scan the history of reconstruction and compare it with the policy he had undoubtedly made up his mind to pursue had his life been spared," can perhaps imagine his thoughts and his words. What more delicate hint could be given of special knowledge gained on the secret sessions when summoned to Washington at critical periods of the great struggle to give wise counsel to the harassed Chief Magistrate. We have thought that we could guess what the Martyr President would say if he could rev sit the earth and see the Confederacy climbing on top of the Nation that he thought had triumphed. But our contemporary evidently knows all about it for he speaks with the ease of a veteran who must have been there, of the wise and patriotic men in the Republican party in 1865-70 of whom the "sad" all or nearly all have gone left us. We are so sorry.

Our old fashioned contemporary tells us that those former Republican patriots believe that the party would gain more by a policy of magnanimity toward the South than by a policy of never ending hatred. But see how our indignant contemporary rebukes the degenerate Republican party in these words:

> Instead of the olive branch held out in sincerity it has offered only the clenched and the ready blow."

Well well, well how much clearer these matters do look to experienced eyes! Now we had really entertained the idea that the Republican party had been doing considerable in the olive branch line ever since the close of the war, and that for the past two years the party had been exclusively engaged in the olive-branch business. Of course we must be mistaken for our distinguished contemporary says that instead of olive-branches it has been only "the closed hand and the ready blow." Well it dreadful come to think of it. The way the Republican party has flung amnesty bill and pardons and removals of disabilities at the heads of those who only fought to destroy the Republic, is certainly unparalleled in its barbarity. The war was hardly over before the Republicans began to drag those unfortunate people back into the privileges and immunities of citizenship, and they have continued their tyrannical policy until the Solid South sits swaggering with its feet on the neck of Southern Loyalty and Republicanism, while the confederacy has moved its administration and its war chiefs into the National Capitol.

The next time our esteemed contemporary seeks to portray the frightful intolerance and malignant proscription that have characterized the policy of the Republican party toward the South, we commend to him the quotation of the following powerful sketch of the results of Republican proscription, as drawn by the Democratic Chicago Times:

> Both branches of the Congress of the Confederate States have now been removed from Richmond to Washington. Nearly all the officers of the Confederate States Government are members of one House or the other. The fleshless skeleton of Vice President Stephens, suggesting a reanimated tenant of the old Bourbon graveyard, is the most notable object in the Representatives' chamber. Postmaster-General Reagan and one or two other members of the Richmond Cabinet are leading members of the right in the same chamber. Seventy or eighty other members of the right were members of the Congress at Richmond or Brigadier-Generals of the Confederate Army. The Congress of the Confederate States has been removed to Washington, and nearly all the commanders of the Confederate armies are come to Washington as members thereof. Jefferson Davis is the only conspicuous member of the Richmond Government who has not moved to Washington as a member of the Southern Congress. But the Confederates of Mississippi are talking of sending him to the Senate in place of Bruce, whose term expires. Unless Providence should interfere, there is not the least reason to doubt that the President of the Confederate States will also remove to Washington and resume the robe of public office as a Confederate Senator.

> We are so sorry that the poor, modest, inoffensive Southerners have been so badly treated, and that our statesmanlike contemporary should be annoyed by "the mad outcry of Chandler or the ravings of the Illiterate Logan." So sorry!

THE SAME OLD WOLF

(From the New York Tribune.)

The Becks and Blackburns in Congress are roaring very gently just now. They would like to have the country believe that when they talked of waging outlawry vestage of the legislation of the war and starving the Government to death unless they were permitted to do so they really meant nothing serious, in short, that they are no wolves at all, but only innocent sheep, incapable of doing any harm. It is pleasant to see them in such a peaceable and amiable humor but we should nevertheless insist that the Republicans did not cry "Wolf!" without cause or a moment too soon. The country had a rough experience with that breed of sheep a few years ago, and is naturally rather sensitive when they begin to show their teeth. It is not very long since a dispute arose about the constitutional right of States to secede from the Union, and the gentlemen from the South who are now managing the Democratic party and making themselves conspicuous at Washington took the side which patriotic Union-loving men thought the wrong side. It cost a good many thousands of valuable lives and a good many millions of dollars to settle that dispute. When these same gentlemen, a few weeks ago, set up another peculiar interpretation of the Constitution, and declared that the President must abandon his right to judge of the merits of a bill and submit to be corrected by Congress, under penalty of having the whole machinery of Government stopped it is not wonder people who have not forgotten the events of 1861 looked upon it as a serious matter.

Nor will they be entirely reassured by the lip-mouthed protestations of innocence the Democratic leaders are now making. They will naturally ask what is the purpose of the extra session if the threats of last month were only empty rhetoric and have already died out with the March winds? What is Congress doing in Washington if it is to keep within the limit of its powers and leave laws unassailed which the Democrats do not possess the constitutional two-thirds to repeal in spite of the President's veto? There was no need of an extra session to raise the question before the country of the wisdom of repealing the legislation which is so obnoxious to the Democrats. That issue was fairly raised and fully discussed in the regular session last Winter, and the two parties made their records upon it. Time, the Democrats did not then have the machine but the control of that body makes no difference in the logic of their position. The two houses together have no more right than one alone to force legislation upon the country against the objections of the President except by a two thirds vote, and if the purpose of the Democrats was to assume that they are the whole Government and the Executive ought to stand out of their way, they might just as well have set up that assumption before the fourth of March as since, and made up the case for the popular verdict. The attitude of the President and the Republican party was perfectly well defined, and there was no reason to think it would change when the senate passed out of Republican control. The Appropriation bills might have been passed; the same political issue raised as was in fact raised, and has only been emphasized, and the country saved the needless worry and expense of an extra session.

The truth is, the Democrats are not sincere in their present professions. The threats they indulged in when the new Congress met were not meant as harmless grasconade. Fooling the Election law a barrier to their success in 1880, they formed a deliberate plan for coercing the President into consenting to its repeal by starving the Government and if they have now abandoned that plan it is only because they are frightened at the signs of popular indignation. They probably imagined they could make the issue upon one between the people and the President but the people penetrated the stupid disguise, and saw the issue in its true light, as one between the Constitution and revolution. They recognized the hand of the rebel wolf, and they will not be deceived by the dress or the efforts of the Democrats to pull a sheepskin over the animal's ears.

A GREENBACKER'S CRAZY SCHEME

HE WANTS THE GOVERNMENT TO LEND A BILLION DOLLARS FOR CREDIT MOBILIER SCHEMES

Representative De La Matyr, the exclergyman who was elected to Congress in Indiana last year as a champion of financial reform, has just introduced the craziest of all the crazy schemes of Greenback origin. He has filed a petition, embodying a bill, to establish a "greenback currency" and "to relieve the financial distress of the country" by granting Government loans of cent on companies, incorporated by State authority, for works of internal improvement. It provides that the Secretary of the Treasury be required to have prepared at the earliest practicable period, notes and obligations of the United States to the aggregate amount of $1,000,000,000 to be known as "Greenback Currency" for general circulation in such amounts and in such form as the bill provides, which notes or obligations, when issued, shall constitute a legal-tender for all debts and shall be receivable for all United States Government dues. The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized by the bill to loan from such "Greenback Currency" to certain corporations upon application by their properly authorized officers, providing said corporations shall file their bonds for the same bearing their corporate seal, in the following terms. Said bonds shall be payable fifty years from the date thereof, and shall bear no interest for five years from said date, but at the expiration of five years shall bear interest at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum, legal money, the interest to be paid semi-annually. The following are the corporations mentioned who shall have the advantage of the loan above described: The James River and Kanawha Canal Company, $60,000,000; the Atlantic and Great Western Company, $50,000,000; the Pacific Coast Canal Company, $12,000,000; the Florence St. Philip Canal Company, $10,000,000; for railroad to connect the waters of the Mississippi with the Pacific Coast; the Rock Island and Hennepin Canal Company, $18,000,000; the Oswego Canal Company, $25,000,000; the Lexington and Big Sandy Railroad Company, $5,000,000, and the Niagara Ship Canal Company, $14,000,000.

The editor of the Commercial has progressed so far as to tell us that "there were many wise and patriotic men in the Republican party in 1865-7," but he denounces the Republicans of to-day as "trundle-bed demagogues." Will our venerable contemporary kindly inform us what style of trundle-beds were in use at the period referred to?

ANOTHER GRAND OLD PATRIOT GONE.

At 11 30 o'clock Monday night, General John A. Dix peacefully passed away, and a life full of honor and of public service gently closed. Few men have been more prominently in public life and few have enjoyed more universal esteem than the veteran soldier and statesman. Born in New New Hampshire in 1798 he had reached his eighty-first year, and even that extended career had been crowded throughout with eminent labors and distinguished honors. The record of the sturdy old patriot is entitled to more detailed reference than we can give in this announcement of his death, and we wish now to simply offer a tribute of esteem and gratitude. With all his varied and distinguished public services, all his eloquent speeches and powerful writings, his name will long be most familiarly remembered in connection with the ringing message with which he sounded the key-note of loyalty in 1861, when as Secretary of the Treasury he telegraphed to his Federal subordinate in New Orleans the immortal words

"If any man attempts to haul down the American Flag, shoot him on the spot."

THE CORPORAL BREAKS SILENCE

BY REV. JEREMIAH S. COX.

I have been lyin', parson
To find whose I am, an' what,
That Christ's Union soldier
I'll mighty have forgot.
But why I was, of the good new it,
Don't seem plain to-day
That I'll go again, if able,
I'm not quite ready to say.

They've thrown away the victory
We bought with toil an' blood
Beat the enemies Home a fragin
With the rear uv Treason filled
The fever calenture to cool
Th' good old Union ship
Et the grin at the whole don't save us
They've got us in their grip.

An' they'll best ez surely triumph
Ez we allus in th' agin
Counter us helms to keep it
The ship by their light is ez plain
Ez ever their line to beat,
Wherein more manly way
They sought to steal a victory
From the best uv deadly fray.

My hope is that the repute
Whose name an' venemous lies
Gave us of old sore warning,
Will raise again to curse us,
Rin renewed an reckless battle
Again Union with the North
If so, we may know the course
On which our lines goes forth.

The song we that cradle is deadly
Ez best to hope that's in store,
Let he who knows the cost to hide it
While we's asleep secure,
But on the floor uv the Senate
And the federal house Hall,
Will unwittingly sound the summons
That again to the lines will call—

All who fought for the Union,
All who gave brothers or friends,
Really grain to rescue them
Embolden the solid south defender
Where is the fite, and the spirit
That gave us sixty one,
Shrinking shall him an' loyal
Until the battle was done.

"Let us level our Soldiers monumente,
An' low their humble graves
Like our old swords an' muskets
An' bridge like smack uv slaves
Before the sweep uv South
Uv We've come back to stay
Until the blood uv the nation,
An' not its life away."

"If my old leg there in the Wilderness
Doesn't kick their traitorous soul,
I swear I will shit over it
In the last great day uv God,
When He in the Resurrection
Shall back an' buried both
Will look sorer or thing shirt—
Et's no all the same to Him."

Before I'll wear about me
One bit uv blood to bind
Traitors to their treason forever,
Whether it's front or on own
Or the blue of the Republican
Or in Legislative Hall
Whether it fight with bullets
Or only with ballot ball.

Four years since the Cornerst
Presented like a brigade
Would make on the Union Congress
A timid and dead rush
Who has lived to see him in the Senate
And to meet a live rebel say,
"We are here to save our country
Of your legislation away."

THE GREAT POLITICAL REVIVAL

A GRAND RALLYING ON THE LINE OF STALWART REPUBLICANISM—STALWARTS EVERYWHERE NOW—THE PARTY AROUSED FOR THE CONTEST OF 1880—TRUE PRINCIPLES AND TRUSTFUL LEADERS AGAIN AT THE FRONT.

WASHINGTON, April 21, 1879.

To the Editor of the Whig & Courier

If the soul of stalwartism resurrected is not "marching on" to triumph a great many people are mistaken, beside those hateful implacables, who used to bother the doughfaces only one short year ago with predictions about the growth of plantation manners and the possible elevation of the ex-Confederacy on top of the national cuticle. Here is don reformer now?—that Conkey who used to read us out of the party because we asserted that the sale of Louisiana and South Carolina and the retail trade in official appointments stamped the late Mr. Hayes as a person without an honest bone in his body? Where, indeed? Shortly it shall be recorded that death alone can ferret out the Conkey who a few brief months ago was sure that Hayes and the Confederate Greeks could do no wrong, and that Republicanism was a defunct ideality. Even James, Freeman Clarke may return, and we know full well that Carl Schurz and his sort, scenting the Democratic disaster not far away, with the offices rebounding to the Republican managers, are willing to compromise and call the stalwarts pretty good fellows after all.

THE MASSACHUSETTS CHANGE OF TUNE

Why just reflect upon the aspect. Here is the Honorable George F. Hoar striking an attitude as radically as any body can, reminding us that possibly the blood of one generation ago in the old Bay State courses there yet. There is the Boston Journal singing around remarks dropped by the Inquirer and THE WHIG a year ago, touching the rebel Brigadiers, and the duty of showing a solid steadfast Republican front, just as though it hadn't slandered the same style of conduct in its implacables. And the Washington correspondents of the Boston newspaper syndicate, having lost their hold on the pabulum in Senate Committee clerkships, are as certain that this Democratic regime is revolutionary as we stalwarts were months ago. "Why!" exclaimed a well known stalwart, "why, really this is getting serious, and if I don't beatir myself I shall become a conservative!"

So we are congratulating ourselves on the future politically. The Republican party is itself again, and how funny it will be when we go home to reinspirate old Massachusetts next fall to help in the campaign and to vote—how irresistibly funny it will appear, to be put-shooted on the bloody shirt line by the Young Boston Reformers, and the respectable trades-people who entertained the Confederate Brigadiers because "they came to honor Boston and not to have Boston honor them."

A GREAT PARTY REASSERTING ITSELF.

An amusing phase of this reactionary movement among Republicans was presented to me the other day. I met a federal officer, the genuine Ohio product: "Well" said he "there isn't so much opposition to President Hayes as there was. Everybody seems to agree with him now." That officer couldn't appreciate the laugh upon him, nor the very natural retort: yes; everybody seems to agree with him—that is nobody to object when to quarrel, when there is no official leadership; a vacant office no longer has terrors for them. Before Congress meets at the regular session next December even the shadow of political influence will have departed from this administration, and then, unbridled and unhandicapped, the Republican party will begin one of the most spirited and hearty campaigns that ever has been known in this country—a campaign so clear-cut in its objects that the White House will be unable to identify itself, and Democracy will take to its heels and find the last ditch.

What can be the meaning of all this reactionary movement and love-feasting in the Republican party? Incidentally, that the jugglers of reform and conciliation have had their occasional run, like the tinselled improprieties of the Black Crook, and must give way to legitimate business. The harlequins and clowns have amused the audience and pocketed the profits just like "mere politicians," until the tax-payers, failing to find satisfactory results, are prepared to resume the old methods of going straight for results without deception, and to restore the old agents who make promises to the ear, not like the reform pharisees with the purpose of breaking them to the understanding, but performing them faithfully. The infatuation of politics has retired before the demand for more than the east wind to feed upon.

"THE MOST GREEKS" WAKING UP.

But, chiefly, it means that the time has arrived for the "most Greeks" in this country to take possession of their own. I am aware that that isn't very elegant, but it is true. Were a merchant or a farmer to employ a man on trust to take charge of his work because that man could talk fine theories and expand moral philosophy, only to find that he had developed trade where there was no pay and tried to engraft melons on briar bushes, there would be apt to result a revulsion of feeling that would provoke an effort to make up for time lost in reformatory experiments. The Nation has been unable to collect where it had promises from its reformatory experts, and it finds briar bushes as barren as ever they were—Therefore the Nation says, I will resume possession of my own. And the Nation don't mean the Confederacy. What does mean except the Republican party? Therefore the Republican party, representing the Nation now as it did eighteen years ago, says it will take its own in a little more than one year when the ex-Confederate Congress and the defunct "policy" come up for judgment before the electors. That is as clear as anything in prospect can be.

THE CONFEDERATE DEMOCRACY DOOMED.

The doom of the Confederate-Democratic party is written now plainer than that of the old proslavery Democratic party was in 1860. The dry rot has got a habitation close to the Democratic vitals, and the greedy cancer is eating in from the outside. Repudiation and public plunder make up its internal economy, and violence and fraud at elections form its external attractions. These things are so glaringly conspicuous that the dullest constituency must shortly become forced to sharpest criticism, and as the South becomes solid by coercion, the North will become solid by logic.

THE REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN BEGUN IN EARNEST,

I am violating no confidence and telling no news when I say that the national campaign against rebel domination has already begun with a force so irresistible that the Republicans who prefer chips to meat in politics know that they must give way to the better spirit and the loftiest patriotism of those who believe Republicanism elevates equal rights and financial honesty above the mere form of distributing the public patronage. It has gained such momentum that the Republicans in Congress were forced to organize their campaign committee thus early, to direct the campaign not to inspire it. The inspiration is in the political atmosphere; it wants guidance, but not force, and I think there never has been a year preceding a national campaign when such real confidence was felt in the triumph of the party as is felt now. How could we fail of that confidence when we recollect the certain though slow intelligence of the mass of voters?

THE DEMAND FOR STALWART LEADERSHIP.

The average man who is conservative and wants proof, has found it in the rebel Congress, and the universal demand now is for stalwart leadership to shape the impatient Republican idea. The demand is partly answered in this radical campaign committee, but it is further aggressive, and singular to state, the man upon whom more eyes turn than upon any other as the manager of the next campaign is William E. Chandler. Are there not volumes in that expression? It means aggressiveness, honest, unflinching Republicanism. And it is but the precursor of the demand which will be made next year for national candidates with no suspicion of prostituted Louisiana upon them, with no scent of hypocrisy in their bearing who are clearly defined, steadfast and enthusiastic in their convictions. By such signs and with such men, we are certainly even now scattering dissensions, uniting as of old, and falling into line for a triumphant march in 1880.

August Belmont was thrown from his carriage at Central Park New York, yesterday afternoon and probably fatally injured.

FORTY SIXTH CONGRESS—First Session.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, D C, April 22.

At the expiration of the morning hour the Senate took up Mr Wallace's resolution to vest the appointment and removal of Senate employes in the Secretary and Sergeant-at-Arms the question being on Mr Edmunds' substitute which was opposed by Mr Pendleton and advocated by Mr Conkling. Owing to Mr. Edmunds' absence the resolution went over until to-morrow.

Mr. Pendleton gave notice that on Thursday he would call up his bill providing for giving the heads of departments seats on the floor of the Senate and House.

The Senate resumed consideration of the Army bill.

Mr Garland took the Democratic side of the question and said it was not the small number of troops actually in the Southern States power behind them which was an object of terror. Rather than see the liberties of the humblest citizen longer abridged he would see the capitol crumble to pieces, ships rot at their moorings and the Supreme Court unfrocked.

Mr Davis, of Ill., followed in a long speech deprecating the party strife predominant in the debate. Mr Allison made the next speech and at four o'clock the Senate went into executive session soon after adjourning.

House.

The House dispensed with the reading of the journal and resumed consideration of the subsidiary Silver Coins bill. Mr. Hiestand made a brief statement in favor of the bill. The House then proceeded to vote on the amendments.

An amendment was offered by Mr. Gillette for the redemption of the subsidiary silver coins in paper fractional currency, but it was subsequently withdrawn. An amendment was offered by Mr Newbury requiring that small coins, cents, three cents, etc, be received for postage or stamps in sums not exceeding $3. Agreed to. The House passed the bill. As passed it provides that silver coins smaller than $1 be exchangeable for lawful money in sums of $20, and makes lawful money exchangeable into silver coins in like amounts. It also makes subsidiary silver coins a legal tender for all debts, public and private, in sums not exceeding $20, and makes the minor coinage receivable at Post Offices to the amount of $3.

In Committee of the Whole on the Legislative bill, Mr. Covert of New York, spoke on the Democratic side of the question, confining himself to a recital of what he characterized high handed outrages perpetrated in New York under colorof the infamous federal election law.

Mr. Frye of Me. asked leave to interpose a remark, but Covert declined to yield, alluding to him as agent of the Oholona States. (Laughter.)

Mr. Muldrow denied the assertion of Mr. Frye the other day that, the Oholona States, and Long Syrup.

was endorsed by scores of other papers South. He said that half of the endorsements were from Republican sources. Those from Democratic sources were those of a recent date.

Mr. Frye undertook to reply, but Mr. Geddes obtained the floor and was proceeding without noticing Mr. Frye. This made Mr. Frye indignant and he exclaimed: "That is the courage of the other side and of the gentlemen from New York and Mississippi who make their flings at me and then shut the door. That is courage! That is chivalry!"

The Chairman interposed and Geddes yielded.

Mr. Frye thanked Chairman Blackburn for his sense of fair play and then replied to Muldrow, quoting from another Democratic paper published at Oskaloosa a laudatory article on the speech made by Chalmers, and from the Oskaloosa States, showing he said that the two papers ate they soup out of the same bowl with the same spoon. He also stated that the circulation of the States had increased 122 per cent since 1874, and had as large a circulation as any Southern country paper. Muldrow challenged the production of a single endorsement of that paper by any Southern newspaper since the publication of the recent articles that have given such notoriety to the paper.

Mr. Geddes resumed the floor and made a speech on the Democratic side of the question.

Mr. Thompson, of Ky., followed on the Democratic side.

Mr Bayne of Pa, made an argument on the Republican side and Shallenberger followed on the same side, when a recess was taken at 7 30 P M.

At the evening session not more than six members were present. After speeches by Waddill, Graves Robertson and Kitchen in favor of repeal and by Dwight in opposition the Committee rose and at 10 o'clock the House adjourned.

FOREIGN NEWS.

THE WAR IN AFRICA.

THE ZULUS LOSE HEAVILY.

Colonel Pearson Rescued.

CAPE TOWN, April 5 Lord Chelmsford's camp at Gingleiova, on the road to Ekowe, was attacked at daybreak on the 3d by 11,000 Zulus who made frequent and desperate attacks on all sides; but were repulsed and pursued with great loss. Four hundred and seventy-one Zulus were found dead around the trenches. The English had five killed and twenty eight wounded. On the 4th inst. Chelmsford left the camp and relieved Ekowe during the night. Col. Pearson and garrison have reached Umbidusi and will arrive at Tugela the 7th. During the investment 28 died and 128 were on the sick list. Ekowe has been evacuated and burned.

The day after the Lettle Cetewayo's brother sent a flag of truce proposing to surrender. Chelmsford replied that the only terms he could grant, were that all the chiefs and men surrender themselves prisoners. The proposal was believed to be a feint to delay the probable advance of Uluudi. Chelmsford and the main force have returned to Tugela river.

Another Fight.

GINGLEIOVA South Africa April 6 The British relief column on reaching here the 1st inst, was attacked by the Zulus. They fought bravely, advancing within thirty yards of the intrenchments. The attack lasted nearly an hour when the Zulus retreated precipitately followed by the mounted infantry and native contingent.

Terrible Hand to Hand Battles.

CAPE TOWN, April 8. In the fight between Wood's command and the Zulus the 28th and 29th of March the retreat of the Zulus was cut off and a hand to hand fight, ensued. The Zulus lost 2500 men.

It is rumored at Pretoria and Natal that the Boers intend investing Pretoria, and threaten to detain Sir Bartle Frere as a hostage unless their demands are complied with. It is rumored also that Frere is returning to Natal.

TROUBLED RUSSIA.

The Revolutionists Threat

Their Secret Organization.

Great Loss by Floods.

ST PETERSBURG, April 22. Preceeding the imperial Ukase a clandestinely circulated organ of the revolutionists demanded the abolition of the third section of the imperial Chancellery and the dismissal of the Court camarilla surrounding the Czar. It published a list of two hundred names declaring the revolutionists would shoot, stab and murder until their demands were satisfied and camarilla swept from the face of the earth. It is estimated that the secret society numbers 19000 working-members besides thousands who have taken the simple oath of loyalty. The value of the property of the society is estimated at 2,000 000 roubles.

Damage by Flood.

MOSCOW, April 22 Moskva river has overflowed its banks. The water reached the second story of houses near the river, and some have been swept away. There has been great loss of property but no lives. At Dunaberg the river Dwina has risen twenty feet above the ordinary level and continues rising. At Penza 500 persons are rendered homeless by the flood.

THE "OLD CORPORAL" INDIGNANT. By request we reprint the stirring verses in which the "Old Corporal" expresses his indignation at the arrogant revival of the "Lost Cause." He expresses a feeling that is fast finding utterance all up and down the ranks of those "who wore the Blue."

DRIFT WOOD. Yesterday afternoon our reporter being down near the Maine Central depot he strolled down upon one of the wharves in the vicinity, where a scene of great activity was brought to view. The ice which has been running down from above had formed a solid jam and was liberally sprinkled with drift wood, varying in size from the large log to the small piece of board. Armed with pick poles a large number of men and boys were out on the ice collecting the wood and carrying it to the wharf, where it was taken by another crowd and placed in numerous piles ready to be hauled away. They worked like beavers and collected a large quantity of wood.

DOUGLASS MINING COMPANY. A meeting for the organization of a Mining Company to operate the Douglass Mine, at Blue Hill, was held at the Bangor House yesterday and adjourned until this morning at ten o'clock. Prof. E. L. Bartlett was present and made a very favorable report, having just returned from a visit to the mine. There are now about twenty men at work taking out some thirty to forty tons of ore per day. Parties have bonded the J. W. Douglass property, consisting of about sixty feet of vein, some four hundred feet wide and adjoining the Douglass Mine, now worked by Captain Gregory. Messrs. Prescott, of Boston, and Arnold, of this city, arrived at the Bangor House yesterday from the Salisbury Mine with rich specimens. Blue Hill is being visited by large numbers of strangers and some will go to Dunnion this week.

VOTED NOT TO ACCEPT. A full meeting of the members of Hammond street church assembled last evening in the church vestry, to take into consideration the resignation of their pastor. Mr. Fay called the meeting to order and pray was offered by Prof. Paine, of the Theological Seminary, after which Dea. Thurston, was chosen Moderator. Mr. Fay then presented several reasons why he had been led to tender his resignation, after which he retired. After a brief season of prayer and remarks a ballot was taken on the question to accept or not, and resulted in not accepting his resignation. The meeting then adjourned.

JANE ALLINE-FOSTER, whose death occurred yesterday, at the advanced age of nearly ninety-three years, was born in Goulsboro', Me, and was the daughter of a Surgeon in the Revolutionary army who was one of the party that threw overboard the tea in Boston harbor. The lady had often when a girl watched the cows as they fed on what is now Boston Common. Her grandfather left Nova Scotia rather than take the oath of allegiance to Great Britian and on arriving at Machias entered the United States army. Mrs. Foster was the mother of twelve children, nine sons and three daughters, seven of the sons and two of the girls are now living, one of them, Gilbert Foster who lives at Cherryfield being seventy-two years of age.

ART ASSOCIATION. The Art Room was the scene of a very pleasant gathering last evening, on the occasion of the last meeting of the season of the Art Association. During the past winter this Association has held meetings nearly every fortnight that have proved fully as instructive as they were entertaining, and have been the means of increasing the interest already taken in art matters. The meeting last evening was wholly of a social character and the members passed away the allotted time very pleasantly, in social intercourse and listening to the music furnished by Messrs Packard and Dinsmore on the piano and violin. At about nine o'clock Hon E B Nealley announced that refreshments would be served and stated that the meetings would be resumed some time during October next.

MISS CHARLOTTE THOMPSON will appear in Norombega Hall Thursday and Friday evenings of next week, under the management of the Bunkin Club. The pieces selected are "Jane Eyre" and "Miss Multon." Miss Thompson made her first appearance in Bangor as "Jane Eyre," but to a small audience as she was then almost unknown here. She has played the character over twelve hundred times in all the largecities, and notably for one hundred and thirty consecutive nights at the Union Square Theatre, N. Y. A New York critic in speaking of Miss Thompson's acting in this role, said "I do not hesitate to say that Miss Thompson is equal to the great Charlotte Cushman in her impersonation of the difficult role of "Jane Eyre." In the character of "Miss Multon," Charlotte Thompson is undeniably without an equal in the world, and her acting in this role is pronounced by the best critics in the country to be the most wonderful, effective life-like, and thrilling pieces of emotional acting ever seen on any stage. Crowded houses will undoubtedly be the rule, during Miss Thompson's brief engagement.

"THE PRIZE" In yesterday's issue we published an item in relation to an abandoned schooner picked up by the steamer Katahdin, and now we find the following additional particulars in the Portland Advertiser. The schooner Julia Clinch lies at the end of Long wharf in a bad condition. The schooner is owned by C N Clinch, of Musquash, N B., and J R Bradford and Hugh Maloney of St Andrews. She was commanded by John Maloney, and sailed from St. Andrews on the 12th instant, bound for Portsmouth with a cargo of cedar railway ties, owned by J S Leighton of Woodstock, N. H. Friday the schooner passed through the Fog Island thoroughfare making the passage with great difficulty. The crew were completely worn out by their efforts to manage her, and Saturday, despite their efforts she struck on Bantam ledge near Boothbay. The crew remained on board for some time when seeing no prospect of getting afloat and the gale freshening, Captain Maloney decided to abandon her, and with the crew took to the boats and landed on Damascove Island, where they remained till Monday when they were taken off by some fishing crafts and brought to Portland, where they found the schooner had arrived before them, having been picked up by the steamer Katahdin and towed in. She must have floated off Saturday night, as Sunday morning she was boarded at considerable risk by the crew of the steamer Cambridge, which was compelled to leave her having broken a wheel rod. The Clinch is a two masted schooner of 131 tons burden. She carried a heavy cargo, which was all saved.

Scientific Temperance.

A fair sized audience assembled in City Hall last evening, and listened to several very able speeches in favor of introducing the study of the evils of alcohol into the curriculum of the public schools. The Corresponding Secretary of the Women's Christian Temperance Union explained that the books, which they wished to introduce, were two able and interesting scientific works upon the subject, and that one of them was suitable for the High school and the other for the grade of the Intermediate schools.

Rev. Dr. Hamlin was the first speaker, and he said that he believed in the propriety of teaching the youth the effect of alcohol upon the system, and upon the morals and thought that many would be kept from falling, thereby. He alluded to the signal success of such teaching in Turkey.

Hon. A. G. Wakefield said that he thought if the children were taught this lesson in the schools they would remember it, also thought that a good influence would spread from the schools to the homes. He said that he had examined the books and found them entertaining and instructive.

Prof. Sewall, spoke of the right of the State to teach morals in schools, and claimed that it had the right as a means of self-defence. Schools are not organized to teach science only, but to make intelligent and useful citizens also. He said that any argument in favor of any kind of moral teaching, was in favor of teaching avoidance of this greatest of evils, intemperance.

Rev. Mr. Spear said that the proposed introduction of this study into the schools was one of the strategies which were practicable in fighting the great enemy, alcohol. Comparing the usual temperance work to saving a few survivors from wrecks by life boats, he said that this work was like the building of ships that could not be wrecked, so much did it exceed the usual work in importance.

Prof. Paine, being called upon, excused himself from speaking, owing to the lateness of the hour, but expressed himself as heartily in favor of the proposition. The meeting then adjourned.

Serious Danger

Threatens every man, woman or child living in a locality of country where fever and ague is prevalent, since the germs of malarial disease are inhaled from the air and gain access to the system of each a region. Medicinal safeguard is absolutely necessary to nullify this danger. A means of fortifying and acclimating the system so as to be able to resist the malarial poison. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is pronounced by the best and the most popular. Irregularities of the stomach, liver and bowels encourage malaria. Whenever these organs manifest symptoms of disorder, they should be regulated by the use of a vigorous as well as regular medicine. ST. NICHOLAS,

Scribner's Illustrated Magazine

FOR GIRLS AND BOYS.

AN IDEAL CHILDREN'S MAGAZINE.

Messrs. SCRIBNER & CO., in 1873, began the publication of St. Nicholas, an illustrated Magazine for girls and boys, with Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge as editor. Five years have passed since the first number was issued, and the magazine has won the highest position, [illegible] a monthly circulation of OVER 50,000 COPIES.

It is published simultaneously in London and New York, and the prompt and cordial recognition it at once met with in both countries, in the American Athenæum it was declared to be in every way the best publication of the kind ever issued, and in the London Literary World it was pronounced "the model magazine for boys and girls." [illegible] editor, Mr. Dodge, has secured the services of [illegible] contributors, and will continue to make it the best magazine for children that can be produced, and the [illegible] constantly follows after the [illegible] St. Nicholas.

"Alone in the World of Books."

The New York Tribune [illegible] of St. Nicholas, has reached a higher platform, and commands for its pages writers and resources in art and letters than any of its predecessors or contemporaries." The London Literary World says: "There is no magazine for the young that can be said to equal the choice profusion of Scribner's Jack."

Good Things for 1878-9.

The arrangements for literary and artistic attractions for the new volume—the [illegible] commence with the November number—are already [illegible], drawing from almost [illegible] sources as well as from promising new ones. Mr. [illegible] Stockton's next [illegible] story of [illegible]

"A JOLLY FELLOWSHIP,"

will run [illegible] the twelve months' issue, beginning with the November number, and will be illustrated by James E. Kelly. There will be one or [illegible] installments in [illegible] and the Bahamas, for [illegible] will be continued [illegible]

"Half a Dozen Housekeepers."

By Sarah Orne Jewett, with [illegible] illustrations by [illegible] Hopkins, [illegible] the same [illegible] and [illegible] a fresh serial by Susan Coolidge, entitled "[illegible]" [illegible] with plenty of pictures, will [illegible] one [illegible] yearly [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
